NO BANQUET, MONEY FOR RED CROSS

The St. Nicholas Society of the city of New York, of which Judge Clearwater is vice-president, has decided to omit its customary celebration of the Festival of Pass, a Dutch festival which it has annually celebrated for the last eighty-two years. It will donate to the American Red Cross the sum of $500, the amount of its usual appropriation for the celebration of the festival.

Musical Comedy at Orpheum.

Van's big musical comedy company of twenty people, mostly girls, opened a week's engagement at the Orpheum theater on Broadway, Monday afternoon and pleased two large audiences. The company is said to be one of the best of its kind that has played at the Orpheum in a long time.

IN THE TRENCHES AT SPARTANBURG

Andy Worff Writes of Some of the Humorous Features He Sees While Training for Service at the Front.

In the Trenches at Spartanburg, March 14—This time I am writing this in the trenches. We came in at 8 o'clock this morning and will remain here till Sunday morning. When we arrived here I was detailed to do some digging of sleeping quarters. They are dug in the side of the trench about 3 feet down and 6 feet in, about 4 feet wide. They are here to sleep in except when it rains. We haven't experienced anything like this yet but the sky looks very unpleasant to us all. We all hope it keeps up (in the sky). We expect also to have gas attacks, scouting parties and other real warfare stuff. Well, here comes a call for Worff. "Yes, here I am." "Report to Co. Headquarters as telephone operator."

"Yes, sir."

Oh! This is a pipe. Nothing to do but sit down and answer the telephone and make report of all calls; work 4 hours on and 8 off; lots of sleep, too.

Excuse me! There goes the alarm for gas. I must get my mask on. All over. It was tear gas. We have one bright fellow here. When he saw some one putting on their mask he said in a rather boasting voice: "Ah! What's the matter with you guys? What are you going to do when you get on the other side if you can't stand a little thing like that?" and he did not put his mask on. But when the tears began to come to his eyes he walked away, rubbing his eyes, and in another part of the trench he could not get his mask on quick enough. But then the poor boob was out of luck because he could not rub his eyes anymore and he was in misery for quite a while.

That reminds me of some things they do in the army. Last winter when it was real cold we would be called out to drill without overcoats and on real pleasant days we would have to appear with them on. But nevertheless we are still alive and hoping that some day this summer we will not be called out with our overcoats on under our shirts.

Also last winter I noted an incident while out in the field. We saw a few colored men driving teams and to keep warm they had bon fires on their wagons, directly in back of the seat. Then again I was down on a rather snappy Sunday afternoon and in the negro district saw a bunch of the houses whose whole family gathered around the fireplace, warming their hands and knees, and both windows and door wide open. Such is the intelligence and ambition of the south.

Just got word over the wire to prepare for a sham battle and gas attack also, so will close now and prepare. Will finish after the attack. 1:45 p. m. now.

4 p. m.—The attack is over. Our company came out victorious. They went over the top and captured the enemy. No gas!

The latest rumor about camp now is that we are going to New York some time this or next month and then leave for "over there." But, of course, there are so many rumors of all sorts that we do not believe anything till we really see it happen.

I receive The Freeman sometimes one a day and then sometimes they don't come for 3 or 4 days, when I will get three or four or more in one day. Last week one day I received seven in one day. But it makes no difference to me so long as I receive them, as I am always most anxious to get a Freeman for the home news, which surely delights me at all times. Regards from dear old Co. 1, 71st. Remaining, very respectfully yours,
ANDY WORFF,
Co. 1, 105th Inf.,
Camp Wadsworth,
Spartanburg, S. C.

DAYLIGHT SAVING BILL IS SIGNED

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Mar. 19.—Pres. Wilson this afternoon signed the daylight saving bill whereby it is expected that many millions of dollars will be conserved in the preparations for war. No ceremonies of any kind attended the final act that lines the United States up with practically all the European nations in giving mankind an hour more daylight throughout the summer. Under operation of the law all clocks will be set forward an hour at 2 a. m. on the morning of March 31. At the end of October they will be turned back one hour.

He Was Jesting.
Altering that his scintillating remarks were said in a jest and that he never meant any harm, Smith Lee, deputy sheriff of Ulster county, was arraigned before Judge Conger in Poughkeepsie on Saturday and after a severe reprimand was discharged. Lee was charged with saying that "unless some action is taken at once by the food administrator, I will lead an insurrection to compel the government to give us sufficient food to keep us from starving." When arraigned Lee said that he had three boys of draft age and they were awaiting the call to the colors.

MAN WHO CAPTURED THE FLAG IS DEAD

Isaac Thomas, Formerly of Kingston, Died in New York City Monday—Captured the Enemy's Flag at Battle of Antietam.

Captain Isaac Thomas, formerly of this city, died Monday in St. Luke's Hospital, New York city, of peritonitis, aged 80 years. He was born at Malden-on-Hudson on August 9, 1838, and was one of a family of seven children.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, he went from Ulster county to the front as first lieutenant of Company G of the Old Twentieth Regiment, Eighty New York Volunteers, and served throughout the war. The captain of the company was killed in action and he was promoted to captain, and had charge of the company on its return home after the close of the war. He took a deep interest in all his comrades and for many years attended the annual reunions. He was well acquainted with the Battlefields of Gettysburg, which he visited annually.

For many years Captain Thomas resided in Rondout. Removing to New York city a number of years ago, he was in Kingston two weeks ago to attend the funeral of a relative, and expressed the hope that he would be able to attend the annual reunion of his comrades next August.

He is survived by one brother, Captain Henry W. Thomas of this city, and by several nieces and nephews. He was a brother of the late Charles M. Thomas, who served in the same regiment during the war.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday evening at 9:30 o'clock from Campbell's Funeral Parlor, Broadway and Sixty-sixth street, New York city.

At the Battle of Antietam, Captain Thomas distinguished himself by capturing the Confederate battle flag with which he returned safely to his own ranks. His heroic exploit was the theme of the poem, "What Isaac Thomas Did," which was written immediately afterward by the late Henry Abbey, the well known poet of this city, and published in The Freeman in October, 1862.

The poem is as follows:

What Isaac Thomas Did.
With scarce ten rods between,
All earnest haters,
Battled, at Antietam,
Patriots and traitors,
Death swung his sickle wide,
For his dark regions,
Holy, on either side,
Pressed the massed legions.
Justice, yet slow to strike,
Upheld her steel yards;
And the green fields were like
A table of billiards,
Where, in the charge's shout
Of wild derision,
Death knocked the balls about
With grim precision.
Loudly the cannon spoke,
Teaching scorn manners,
While in the battle smoke
Flaunted the banners.
Then Isaac Thomas came,
Being no coward,
Saw the foe's flag of shame,
Hateful and froward—
Rushed from the Union ranks
Into the traitor,
Shot down the flag there,
And a while later,
As, with the deed, the men
Stood half-snatched,
Came back unscathed again,

The Knights of Columbus War Fund Campaign in Kingston and Ulster county is, like every other fund raised in this county for patriotic purposes, "going over the top," if reports for the first day of real work mean anything. Already more than two-thirds of the fund has been raised. The following table shows the situation in the city and county at a glance:

At the meeting of the workers this evening the speakers will be Judge Clearwater, Harry H. Flemming and Patrick H. Cullen.

Owing to the rush of subscriptions it was found impossible to tabulate them in time for The Freeman today, but every pledge will be acknowledged in this paper at the earliest possible date.

W. H. McCord, field director for the Ulster-Sullivan county district, this morning received this telegram from campaign headquarters in New York:

"Your telegram announcing Kingston city and Ulster county results produced great enthusiasm at general headquarters tonight. I am instructed by His Eminence, Cardinal Farley, and our chairman, John Agate, to extend to your chairman and workers the most hearty congratulations, and to announce to you that the feeling here is that Kingston and Ulster will go away over your quota. Reports from all districts show the campaign is a tremendous success."

"WILLIAM P. LARKIN, Secretary."

The campaign workers of the Knights of Columbus War Fund drive met at the K. of C. Home Monday evening to make returns of the first day of the campaign and the total amount collected in the different wards and towns in the county aggregated the magnificent sum of $17,510.51.

A luncheon was served by Casper Ketterer, after which John E. Mahar, general chairman, who presided, introduced John D. Schoonmaker as the first speaker of the evening.

Mr. Schoonmaker has just returned from visiting two of the army camps, Camp Hancock, Ga., and Camp Wadsworth at Spartanburg, S. C., and related some of his many interesting experiences. While at Camp Hancock he had the pleasure of being present when Secretary Lansing reviewed 28,000 of the troops.

On his visit to Camp Wadsworth he recalled his happy moments spent with Major Frank L. Meagher and the local boys connected with this organization, and the most prominent thing that stood out above all other and that impressed him the most was the "Everybody Welcome" sign on the Y. M. C. A. and K. of C. buildings where "the boys" could find the only place to relax from the monotonous side of soldier life. His statement that "the boys" who give up their blood and their lives for us are justly entitled to all that these organizations are doing and meriting the support of all the citizens, was met with vociferous applause.

The following song, "Over the Top," led by Frank P. Messinger, was so enthusiastically received that it was repeated a number of times:

"Over the Top."
(Words by Kathryn Humphrey).
We're going over,
We're going over,
The top in this campaign
Our boys must not complain.
We're going to do it,
We're going to do it,
Now you just watch and see,
We will show the world
What the K. of C. can do
To uphold Democracy.

John M. Cashion was the next speaker and paid a tribute to the Y. M. C. A. which organization has been doing all in their power to co-operate with the K. of C. both in the rations and here at home. He spoke at Phoenicia on Saturday night and said that the Presbyterian and Methodist ministers and the Catholic priest, the only religious denominations having churches in that village, were seated alongside of one another on the platform and the enthusiasm which was manifested gave rise to the feeling that the days of "religious suspicion" were over.

Thus Isaac Thomas fought,
And in the beauty
Of the brave act he wrought,
Fulfilled his duty.
O Land! such deeds are dear,
Thy war was from us,
Honor and cheer, cheer, cheer.
For Isaac Thomas.

THOSE WHO MUST DELINQUENTS IN DIVISION NO. 3

If Kingston passes through a local option election in April it will mean that women will have their first opportunity to vote in this city since they were given the right at the last election. April 5 and 6 have been designated as registration days and all women desiring to vote on April 15, must register on either of the two days named. It also means that all those men who vote for the first time this year must also register if they desire to vote. Those who are not required to register on the days in question are those who registered last year, unless they have changed their residence since the last election.

MOTORMAN ROE'S FIRST TRIP TODAY

He Was Badly Injured When His Trolley Car Was Hit by the West Shore Train at the Broadway Crossing, Which Resulted in the Death of Three.

Motorman Chet Roe enjoyed his first trolley ride today since the fatal Broadway crossing accident which resulted in the death of three passengers on the ill fated trolley car that was struck by the New York newspaper train. Mr. Roe is unable to walk without the aid of crutches. He rode down town on the trolley car in charge of his friends, Motorman "Tim" Hannon and Conductor "Jack" Dawe. Motorman Roe's many friends were glad to see him out again. While he was badly injured in the accident he is rapidly recovering. The other victims of the accident are also slowly improving. Daniel Healey of Abel street is reported as improving slowly at his home. He was a passenger on the trolley car.

Music For A. B. C. D. E.
Plans for the perfection of every detail of comfort and pleasure at the coming annual Benediction Charity dance, Easter Monday, are rapidly being perfected. Music of the best sort will be provided by the Musicians' Union, and as usual there will be a fine promenade concert to precede the dancing. The ticket committee reports a most gratifying sale of tickets already, and the "dancers" list is already assuming such proportions as to gladden the hearts of those interested in raising the funds for the maintenance of the Charity Ward of the Benediction.

LIEUT. JOHNSTON PROUD OF BOYS

From Ulster County--Says They Have "Gone Through With Flying Colors"--The Lieutenant is Grateful for Christmas Box Sent to Him
by Kingston Elks.

Mr. Decker has received an interesting letter from Dr. Frank A. Johnston, a Kingston man who is doing his bit at the U. S. School of Military Aeronautics, Austin, Texas. The letter follows:

Secretary C. V. A. Decker, B. P. O.
E. No. 550, Kingston, N. Y.

My Dear Sir:--Apologies for my failure to acknowledge the very gracious box sent me at Texas by Elks Lodge 550 are absolutely "too thin" to excuse my failure to send word of its receipt and the very great joy I felt at receiving it.

The box was very acceptable and the smokes more than appreciated.
We have difficulty in getting good cigars here. Better still were the thoughts that although we were over a thousand miles away we were not forgotten by our friends in Kingston.

I should be ashamed to acknowledge it, but I have attended the Austin Elks' lodge much more frequently than I did Kingston Lodge, but this proves more certainly than any other fact the value of being an Elk, for it is when a fellow is away from home and among strangers that he wants friends, and I must say that I have found the same cordial spirit here among the brother Elks that exists at home and I have enjoyed their hospitality immensely ever since the second night I arrived at Austin. I certainly shall not soon forget the enjoyable and close friendships I have formed, both at home and here at Austin through the medium of the Elks' Lodge.

Since leaving Kingston seven months ago I have been continually busy, not having had a day's vacation. We have a school here of about 1,500 students preparing for the aviation service. There are seven other schools in this country of a similar nature, each situated at some university, but on account of the climatic conditions and the large number of flying fields in this state, this school is probably larger than the rest.
We have a medical force of five doctors, and at present I am acting post surgeon, and in charge of the hospital work exclusively.

For the benefit of those brother Elks who may have relatives or friends in the service, let me say that they all get the best of attention, far better than we could give them in our private practice.

I work from 8 a. m. until 9 p. m., and make four visits a day to the hospital, besides having serious cases taken care of by special nurses whenever necessary.

We have only had one death here,
and that was following an accidental discharge of a Lewis machine gun.
Five other men were wounded.

I hope to get some special work soon in home surgery preparatory to going abroad, and hope to get a few weeks at Kingston. The weather here is getting extremely hot, and were I not so busy I would be getting homesick for the dear old Catskills, which would look good to me now.

They Ulster County boys who have been here, and there has been a large number, has gone through with flying colors, and I am proud of every one of them.

I wish to thank the lodge again for my Christmas box and my 1918 card, and I hope that the brothers will not think that I am not appreciative of their kindness, because of my lack of convenience in acknowledging their kindness so soon.

With best regards, and hoping to see you soon, I am, fraternally yours, (Signed) FRANK A. JOHNSTON

"DOGS OF THE LINE" IN PROSE AND VERSE

They Are the Four-footed Companions of New York Guardsmen Who Patrol From Olive Bridge to Wallkill.

The "Watchdog" is published weekly by the officers and men in field with the New York Guard who are on duty guarding public works from Buffalo to New York, and a recent issue contains an interesting account of the work of the dogs which belong to the regiments and more particularly how they spent the winter, for the account was prepared at a time when winter still had a firm grasp on Olive Bridge and all the rest of the county where the New York Guard is stationed.

The 1st county operations, detailed by Captain George B. Snowdon of Utica, who has been in charge of the Olive Bridge detachment, are thus described:

"When we arrived at Olive Bridge, N. Y., that rainy day in August, 1917, we found two dogs ready to greet us. They showed us around and stayed very close for the first few days. They were very faithful to their duties; indeed, always ready for mess at the proper time and made sure to take their rest between their tricks of duty. Their names were Tom and Jerry. As time wore on, they became discontented with the White Lights of Olive Bridge. They were A. W. O. L. several times and also violated other A. W. O. L. court martial was held and the verdict was 'to be shot at sunrise.' The offense that brought about this sad ending was a serious one indeed. We did not mind the petty thieving but when they stole and ate up the better part of a nice spring lamb, why it was simply a case of half-mast flags and slow march.

One day in December we received an order from Regimental Headquarters to obtain an Alameda from Capt. Bloodhead at Atwood. We did, and what he did not do to overcoat and uniforms is not worth mentioning. After due consideration, "Rags" was relieved from duty with this command with the thanks of the C. O. (Thanks that "Rags" had not connected with the C. O.'s new uniform).

Next came Patsy, another one of Capt. Bloodhead's pets. He, like many others, did not care for the gas life at Olive Bridge. He took a Frenchman's second day here and as he was from a very good family we were anxious to cover up the disgrace he had brought upon himself, so he was also relieved from duty.

"We now have a very fine Alameda, loaned to the regiment by D. A. Stewart of Tuckahoe, N. Y. His name is Tipperary and he promises to be a big help when he gets better acquainted with his duties. He must remember that it is a serious offense to attempt to amputate the C. O.'s head simply because he told him to do something he did not want to do. Last but not least, we have with us Jack. This dog came to us alone in October and has been the company mascot ever since. He is on the pipe line about 30 nouns a day and is a very faithful companion to the men. He is a well bred coach dog and has certainly made good with this organization."

Dogs of all detachments of the New York Guard were particularly described for the particular issue of "The Watchdog" and an editorial note beneath a group of eleven pictures of different dogs states:

"The dogs of the regiment cost nothing to feed. They are fed from the scraps of the posts, and the service they return is invaluable. To the eyes of the man on post during the long night hours they add their own. Their four legs will cover a wider area than his two and their keen nose detect that which the eye cannot. They are a great asset. From Shokan to Hillview runs the canine line—of watchfulness, friendliness and efficiency."

It is proposed, and the plan will be carried out if nothing interferes, to breed standardized patrol dogs for the posts of the line. But let it be supposed that this plan will supersede or render superfluous the dogs that are here and have been here since the days of the other regiments. There is need and use for all we have, and the list of that which we have is a long one. Today's "Along the Line" features "Dogs of the Regiment" in accordance with the request of the editors on the subject. And we are well pleased with our showing."

The "Column of Squads" in the same issue contains the following poem concerning the dogs on duty in Ulster county:

"The Dog Patrol."
Dogs of the Line make answer,
What of the job and you?
What of the duty and the night patrol?
What of the stunk and the woodchuck hole?
What of the bacon strip you stole?
What of the work you do?
And an Alameda spoke from the Shokan
Dogs of the Line and you?
This is our job—go to and fro
On the hard packed earth or beaten snow
Down to the culvert mouth and then we begin Through and through. And then we begin
Up at the top of the line again
Up and down in the snow and rain.
Nothing for us but the olive drab
That and the line, and never a crab.
Never a kick or a "you get up."
Never a word from a single pup.
We are the Alameda. We know how
We are the Alameda. We know how.
Woo."

And a small white hunt from Wallkill
Where the mountain winds sweep down
Spoke up with a "Yip" but were the vet's
You can strike your own and can stick
Your butt.
That when you have gone with the men
You like
Well he right down here on the same old like
I served our bit with the Teeth, by Josh
And the Forty-seventh Training Post
We never had to be trained not us.
We started out with this job. The fuss
That knows it better than we do. Why?
We are the veterans. K-Y-M-J-I

SIDEWALK ORDINANCE LEADS TO REQUESTS

As told in The Freeman at the time, the new sidewalk ordinance which recently went into effect, prohibits the placing of any signs or other obstructions on the sidewalk in front of business places without first obtaining permission from the board of public works. This has led to a number of requests from merchants asking permission to place small signs, boothblack stands, peanut roasters, wooden Indians, etc., in front of their stores. The requests will be acted upon at the next meeting of the board of public works.

Work Requires Expert.
An herbarium is a collection of dried plants systematically arranged and named, for ready reference. If the work is well done the material is good and the material in constant demand. The two classes of herbaria are kept separate, being the garden plants and the native or wild plants. Only an expert, and a careful one, may collect with hope of profit.

ACTING CITY JUDGE OFFICIATED TODAY

City Judge Harry E. Schirick was in New York city today on legal business, and in his absence Acting City Judge Augustus Shufeldt was at the city hall. This was the first day the acting city judge was called upon to be present in court, but as there were no arrests made by the police department, he found a clean docket in police court. Attorney Shufeldt was appointed acting city judge the first of the year by Mayor Canfield. His duties consist of presiding at city hall in the absence from the city or the illness of Judge Schirick.

BLACK JOHN

By Q. UNDERWOOD.
(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

There was not an atom of vice in Black John, but he was a fearsome beast for a weak-armed rider who did not understand his idiosyncrasies.

Trained to "go against the bit" by the heavy-handed village blacksmith from whom Casper Carson bought him, he had a mouth like gutta percha, and jaw muscles like steel ropes.

Nannie Carson rode him frequently and sometimes to the discomfort of her escort, who, mounted on a horse of ordinary speed, found it difficult to keep her in sight.

It was probably admiration of Miss Carson's prowess as a horsewoman and a desire to emulate it that induced Miss Lackland to accept Jasper Carson's offer to teach her to ride.

The riding lesson was given in the early morning, in order that the censorious might not see and deride Miss Lackland's inexperience.

But Jasper Carson had something in his heart to say to Miss Lackland, and he had promised himself to say it during one of these delightful rides. It would be so easy, he thought, to ease his soul of its burden while riding by her side. When the morning came he found the brave resolutions of the night before had vanished.

"Mayn't I ride Black John tomorrow, Mr. Carson?" said Miss Lackland, after her sixth lesson. "Your sister, Nannie, says he is perfectly safe if you are along."

"Certainly you may," said Jasper Carson, flushing with pride. So it was that when Jasper Carson rang the bell at the Lackland home that golden morning, Black John bore a sidesaddle.

"Isn't he the dearest thing?" said Miss Lackland, as they cantered along the river road which was overhung with locust trees.

"He's a good old horse," said Jasper Carson. "Hold your reins a trifle longer, Miss Lackland. There, that's right."

"I'm so glad I have learned to ride," she said. Jasper Carson tried to say: "Won't you ride through life with me?" Before he could speak, a ragged unicorn jumped from a tree, and shrieked: "Yah! Yah!"

Black John's nerves were as intolerable as his mouth, and he merely pricked his ears in disapproval but the mare Carson rode was sensitive. She plunged forward in a mad effort to bolt, and Miss Lackland, watching with alarm and admiration, Carson's skilled management increased the pressure on Black John's bit. The horse accepted this as a signal to change his gait, and responded with cheerful alacrity.

Jasper Carson grasped the situation instantly and a cold chill struck to his heart. So long as the girl retained her presence of mind there was little danger of her falling off, but as she simply sat still and pulled on the bit, Black John would turn from the road into a bridge-path that led back home, and his rider would almost certainly be swept out of the saddle by the limb of a tree.

Driving his spurs deep into the sides of his mare, Carson gave chase. The mare had a strain of hunting blood in her and a good burst of speed, but Black John was 200 yards in front when she got her stride, and the bridle path was not more than a quarter of a mile away

As Black John swept around a curve in the road Carson lost sight of him and his fair rider. It was only 200 yards now to the bridge-path, and the single-footer had a lead of nearly one-fourth that distance.

Urging the mare with heel, hand and voice, Jasper Carson dashed on, cursing and praying in turn. He fancied himself standing by Miss Lackland's corpse, and wondered could he live after that.

When Black John turned into the bridge path the mare's lean brown head was at his flank.

"Whoo, John!" shouted Carson. But John felt the pull at the bit, and hearing the clatter of the mare's hoofs, thought it was a race, and put on a little more steam.

Miss Lackland's wrists ached, and she was frightened too badly to heed Carson's prayers to her to drop the reins.

Jasper Carson cursed aloud in his agony when he saw, 50 feet in front of Black John the thick limb of a tree barely high enough for a crouching horseman to pass under. If Miss Lackland struck the limb, it meant death. She saw it, too, and bent low in her saddle. As she crouched she loosed her hold on the reins.

"Whoo, John!" shouted Carson, pulling up so suddenly that his mare slid forward on her haunches

Black John heard the command in the instant the pressure on the bit was released, and stopped in his most abrupt stride. His head had passed under the bough.

Miss Lackland plunged forward, and would have gone over Black John's head but for a friendly snag that caught her hair and jerked her back. Jasper Carson ran up and lifted her from the horse.

"Speak to me, my darling," he said. "Are you hurt? Speak please. I love you so dearly."

Miss Lackland nestled her head close to Jasper Carson's shoulder, looked at him with a half shy, half triumphant smile, and whispered, "I am so glad you let me ride Black John."

True Mahogany.
True mahogany is produced by only two species of trees which are closely related. Swietenia mahogni Jacq and Swietenia macrophylla King, natives of tropical America. There are various cabinet woods passed off for real mahogany. A bulletin recently published by the department of agriculture named 67 species, 41 genera, and scattered through 14 families of the vegetable kingdom.

KINGSTON, N. Y., MARCH 19, 1918

KEEP THE BEES BUSY.

The revival of "bees" has suggested to the officials of the State College at Ithaca the organization of wood-cutting bees to furnish fuel for the poor. The bees are to be held only for the present but also for future use by towns' poor. Every bee helps to make use of energy which otherwise would probably be wasted. Sewing bees are accomplishing a great deal for the boys overseas and in camp who need supplies and almost every woman who helps her own or some neighbor's boy in this way does not miss the time thus utilized when she checks up her account of spare time. The amount of accomplishment, however, shows a big entry.

All this week the men of Ulster county are engaged in a very practical bee which is in the form of a campaign to raise the county's allotment of the Knights of Columbus War Fund. Just as everybody helped to raise the funds collected for the Y. M. C. A. and the Red Cross, or to buy Liberty Bonds, so everybody is helping to raise money for the Knights of Columbus Fund, and now as then all denominational lines are forgotten because our war, and all the funds that help to aid the government or its organized auxiliaries, is being fought for one man or one woman as well as for another, and our boys are sharing the benefits of all contributions and all funds. We are in the war to win; it is not a new spirit to America, only it is more prominent than ever before because the war has brought forcibly home to every American the full realization that there is only one standard for life—the standard of right. We are fighting what is wrong in order to maintain right.

Before the war ends there will be opportunity for a great many bees, and even though some of them may seem odd at first, they will all be helpful and useful. They can be conducted on a large scale or a small one but they should be constant. Every week brings some period of idleness to everybody, and some people have plenty of idleness every day. Idleness during this war has no place for the man or woman at home any more than it has in military life. Our boys in uniform, naval or military, spend no idle days and there is no reason why the people at home for whom they are fighting should demand idleness for themselves as long as they do not expect it of our fighting force. The activity in the army or navy is planned to accomplish a definite result with the least waste of energy, and the same plan must be followed at home. Properly directed energy produces efficiency and efficiency will win the war.

It is a good plan to keep the bees going. They give us new ideas and impart a fresh impetus; they give us a fresh start in new times and new habits, which will keep America at top speed during the war and form the basis of rapid advancement in all directions when the war is over. The idler will have formed habits of useful work; the spendthrift, habits of thrift; the miser, habits of philanthropy; the inattentive, habits of concentration. It is time to begin these habits now and work with military precision on a definite plan, for only in that way can results be accomplished.

Nearly every newspaper reader also reads books. After the news of the day, both local and foreign, has been read and digested, the man or woman who reads settles down in a comfortable chair and prepares to spend the evening with a favorite author or in reading some book of passing fancy. Hours are thus well and profitably spent. The absence of a book to read gives genuine distress to the book reader. Then what about our boys in France? They need books, too. Most of them are from homes where books formed as much of the daily life as the newspaper or the evening meal. They could not carry books with them when they went to camp, or when they embarked for overseas. The hours of duty, if they happen to be on sentry in the trenches, would be unbearable if they could not have books to read. The off-hours in camp must be indeed miserable if there is nothing to read. Any book-reader who has been without something to read can realize the sensation. General Pershing regards books for the soldiers so highly and of such immense value that he has ordered an order to be sent to fifty tons of cargo space monthly for books which the Library War Service of the American Library Association is collecting. A special drive for books for the soldiers is being made this week. It is incredible that the library builders of Kingston who buy other treasures or all the latest books for their own libraries should be so selfish as to keep everything within grasp and be unwilling to share them with the boys whose services make it possible for Americans to have libraries. It is not the worn-out and discarded books now in the attic that are wanted, but real live books such as any healthy-minded American likes. Will Kingston fall down in its duty in this respect? Send the books to the library.

At the same time that National Food Administrator Hoover appeals to the farmers of New York state to market all their wheat before May first except what they need to reserve for seed, it is announced that Mr. Hoover is organizing for vigorous enforcement, regulations on selling prices of wheat mill feeds. By degrees the profiteers are learning that food regulations are not to be trifled with. Only recently a sentence of suspension for twenty-four hours was imposed on fifty-seven New York restaurants and lunch rooms which violated meatless Tuesday and porkless Saturday rules. The sentence was made effective after the porkless Saturdays had been combined with the meatless Tuesdays, but the violations had occurred before that time. Enforcement of the food regulations in New York should not be the end of penalties. If any regulation in Kingston or Ulster county is violated, it should be punished. It is unjust and unfair to those who do obey the law to be compelled to conduct their business in competition with those who through thoughtlessness or disregard of the law, place a premium on those who disregard the law or the regulations framed under it. Strict enforcement works justice and equity.

VICTORY MENUS.

These menus, planned to conserve time, labor and money, to save the foods that are scarce and use those of which there is an abundance, are victory menus in more senses than one. They are prepared by the Department of Home Economics of the State College of Agriculture and Forestry by the New York State Food Commission.

Wednesday—Wheatless Day.
Breakfast.
 Grape fruit in the shell, buckwheat griddle cakes with corn syrup, coffee.

Lunch or Supper.
 Baked hominy with cheese, warmed over stuffed potatoes, cabbage and nut salad, coconut drop cookies, jam.

Dinner.
 Veal cutlet, potatoes boiled in jackets, baked corn (dried or canned), rice pudding.
 Milk for the children to drink at each meal.
 *These dishes may be omitted and the meal still balanced.
 England is boiling all her potatoes in their skins, thus using the most economical of all ways of cooking this vegetable. Potatoes are being used to a large extent in England as a wheat substitute in bread. Even though the supply of potatoes in this country is large, it is far too valuable a food for any part of it to be wasted. Even the skins should be eaten as well. Any surplus potatoes, raw or cooked, may easily be dried for future use.

Rice Pudding.
 Three-quarters cup rice, 1 cup water, 3 cups hot milk, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 5 tablespoons maple syrup, 1 tablespoon butter, 1/2 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup cold milk.
 Soak the rice in the water 20 minutes. Add the hot milk and cook it for 15 minutes. Remove it from the heat, add the salt, the syrup, the butter and the vanilla. Turn the pudding into a greased baking dish. Pour 1 cup of cold milk over the top, cover it, and bake it slowly for two hours.

Coconut Drop Cookies.
 One-third cup fat, 1 cup molasses, 1 egg yolk, 1 cup sour milk, 1/2 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2-3 cup buckwheat flour, 1-2 cup cornmeal, 1/2 cups rice flour, 1-2 cup cocoanut.
 Mix the ingredients in the order in which they are given, sifting the dry ingredients together. Drop the cookies by small spoonfuls on greased pans and bake them in a moderate oven.

Recipes for any of the dishes in these menus which cannot be found in cook books, may be had by writing to the Department of Home Economics, State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

WAR FOOD BOOKS
FREE OF CHARGE

By Telegram to The Freeman.
 Albany, March 19.—Distribution has been begun by the State Food Commission of its five "War Time Conservation Booklets" and one booklet designed to stimulate production of maple sugar. These publications should have wide distribution in order to carry out the task which Governor Whitman has given to the Food Commission, the task of sincere co-operation with the Federal Food Administration in food conservation and of stimulating the production of food in New York state to its utmost limits.

Wheat Saving Bread.
 This is an 8-page booklet packed from cover to cover with tasty recipes telling exactly how substitutes for wheat flour may be used. This is, perhaps, the most important point in the present food conservation campaign.

Potatoes For Patriotism.
 This is an 8-page booklet designed to stimulate the use of potatoes in both city and country. There is a large surplus of potatoes. Potatoes are in part a wheat substitute. This booklet is to help the people of New York utilize its greatest single agricultural asset.

Sugarless Sweets.
 This is a booklet designed to provide the careful housewife with recipes showing methods of sugar conservation without impairing the quality or flavor of her meals. The sugar shortage is by no means over. Every user of this booklet will help to make it less acute.

For the Meatless Day.
 This is a 12-page booklet and contains, perhaps, the most extensive, carefully prepared and best selected list of suggestions and recipes for meat substitutes which has been issued from any source. Meat is thought of as food for fighters. The use of this booklet will aid greatly to the shipments of meat that can be made to our men in France.

All of the above booklets were prepared by the Home Economics Department of the State College of Agriculture at Cornell.

Maple Syrup and Sugar Production.
 This is a booklet from the College of Forestry at Cornell designed to increase the amount of maple sugar made in New York state this year. It contains a statement as to the possible profits in sugar making, suggestions, lists of manufacturers and approximate costs of sugar making equipment.

Copies of any one or all of the above booklets may be secured by addressing an inquiry to the office of State Food Commission, Agricultural Hall, Albany, N. Y.

PRESENT WATCH TO MR. FREDENBURGH

Popular Organist of First Reformed Church Is Pleasantly Remembered By Members of the Church—Presentation by Judge Clearwater.

The First Dutch church last evening presented to W. Whiting Fredenburgh, who for twenty-seven years has been its organist, a fine gold watch, the presentation being made by Judge Clearwater. The Ladies' Aid Society arranged an interesting musical program. There was a piano recital by Mrs. William Eltinger; a selection by Miss Molyneux, the lead soprano of the choir; a recitation by Mrs. Alfred Van Buren, a bass solo, "The Sunshine of Your Smile," by Gordon Burhans; and a duet by the Mary Bruyn and Miss Molyneux. The closing feature was the presentation of the watch.

Judge Clearwater said that the Ladies' Aid Society had invited him to sing, but after listening to all the preceding selections he had concluded to postpone his effort until another evening. He said that music was one of the great essentials of worship. Many people went to church solely for the sermon, forgetting that the sermon was a mere incident to the worship of God, that music from time immemorial, even among pagan nations, had been regarded as one of the great features of the worship of deity. The First Dutch for over a quarter of a century had been fortunate in its music. Mr. Fredenburgh is an accomplished organist, said the Judge. There were members of the congregation who cherished the delusion that they could play the great organ better than he, but fortunately they had not attempted it.

Not only was Mr. Fredenburgh an accomplished musician, but an admirable diplomatist for during the entire time that he had had charge of the music there had been none of those little rifts in the choir which sometimes lead to abysses. Judge Clearwater said the members of the church wishing to signalize their appreciation and their affection for Mr. Fredenburgh had decided to give him a gold watch, which in view of the fact that on Easter Sunday we were going to have a brand new system of marking time in Kingston, he thought a most felicitous gift.

Mr. Fredenburgh, who had not an inkling of what was coming, listened with a puzzled air to the Judge's remarks, was overcome with surprise, but in a few embarrassed words expressed his thanks and his gratitude.

PARENT TEACHERS' IN POUGHKEEPSIE

On Friday of this week, the annual District Conference of the Parent-Teachers' Associations will be held at the Y. W. C. A. building in Poughkeepsie. This conference is next in importance to the annual State convention, which was held last October at Niagara Falls. The Poughkeepsie district, of which Kingston is a part, consists of the counties of Orange, Dutchess and Ulster. The conference last spring was held in our high school auditorium. At this conference, the annual reports of all of the associations of districts are read, and are afterwards sent to the state secretary and printed in the Year Book, a copy of which is then sent to each association. Poughkeepsie is the home of Mrs. W. A. Saltford, state president of the Parent-Teachers' Association, who will preside at the meeting. Every association is entitled to send a delegate to the conference, which will be open to the public. Any member of any of the Kingston associations will be made welcome. The morning session will be called at 9:45 o'clock. Luncheon will be served from 12 to 2 o'clock. The afternoon session, called at 2 o'clock, will be addressed by Superintendent of Schools S. R. Shear, who will give the address of welcome.

PAST WINTER HAS PROVED EXPENSIVE

Both to Household and the Water Department in Having Frozen Water Pipes Repaired—Many Leaks Found.

The past winter has proven one of the most expensive in the history of the city both to the water department and to householders who have been put to considerable expense in having frozen water pipes thawed out. At the present time the water department has a force of men busy hunting for a number of small leaks in the service mains. Owing to heavy frost in the ground which in some places is six feet deep in the ground the leaks have not been discovered as the water comes to the surface. As the frost leaves the ground the water department expects to find many leaks. The past winter has been the most severe in the memory of the oldest inhabitant and more water pipes have been found frozen than can be remembered in years.

CHURCH FOLKS TOLD TO SAVE

Miss Stuart Gives Food Conservation Demonstration—Addresses by Pastor and Mayor in Spring Street German Lutheran Church.

Miss Lillian M. Stuart gave a pleasing and interesting food conservation demonstration in the Spring Street German Lutheran Church school hall on Monday evening, which was largely attended, and there were also a number of men present in the audience. The event proved a real social one, and an exceptionally fine program had been arranged for the occasion.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Herman LaFour sang several selections accompanied on the piano by Mr. Dodge.

In introducing Miss Stuart the pastor, the Rev. A. Schmidt, expressed his satisfaction at the large attendance and of the opportunity given the ladies of the church to acquaint themselves with preparing food substitutes. He said that we have come to a time when we can't eat what we want and like, but must be satisfied with what we can get. For months the state and nation through conservation teaching has endeavored to educate the public up to the point that substitutes must be used.

Miss Stuart in a very able manner gave a demonstration of preparing meat substitutes which was appreciated by those present and is certain to lead to results. Miss Stuart is not only an artist in cooking but is also a most pleasing speaker and she made a deep impression upon her audience.

Pastor Schmidt, at the close of the food demonstration said that he was glad to welcome Mayor Canfield, who was present at the demonstration and in introducing the mayor Pastor Schmidt, among other things said "The history of our church dates back to 1841 when the first effort was made to organize a German Lutheran Church in Rondout. According to two old documents the one in German and the other in English, dated June 13, 1841, and signed by George F. Von Beck, secretary of Delaware & Hudson Canal Company, a German Lutheran Church was organized. It cannot be stated how long this first organization existed."

Another and more successful effort was made to start a German Lutheran congregation and among the promoters of this second movement was George F. Von Beck, who was one of the foremost in the movement. When in the year 1844 a pastor by the name of Kaushenish visited Rondout in the interest of the American Tract Company, he was asked by Herr Von Beck to see to it that the German Lutherans get a pastor and when the Rev. H. Stebbe, the founder and first pastor of our church came to Rondout the same year he was entertained by Herr Von Beck.

This short historical sketch goes to show that Herr Von Beck was instrumental in the organization of our church. This evening we have among us a great-grandson of Mr. Von Beck.

Mr. Von Beck was the first president of the village of Rondout and his great grandson is at present the mayor of the city of Kingston for the third term. This proves that there is such a thing as a natural inheritance.

I have the pleasure and honor to introduce to you our worthy and esteemed mayor, Palmer Canfield, Jr. Yet it is hardly necessary to introduce Mr. Canfield because he is well-known among us, and as the great-grandson of Herr Von Beck, one of the founders of our church, I dare to say he is to us, the members of this old church, one of our cousins of whom we are proud.

Mayor Canfield was greeted with applause as he stepped forward to speak. In referring to Pastor Schmidt's introduction he said he felt exceedingly proud that his ancestry was intertwined with the history of the Spring Street German Lutheran Church in which are and have always been influential citizens. The citizens of German extraction in this city have always proved their faithfulness and loyalty and especially in this time of crisis. In referring to the world war the mayor said that for America the war had only just begun. We should use all means to bring the war to a successful finish as quickly as possible. We may lose a lot of money in the war but we can stand it because we are the richest nation on the globe. We are richer in money and material than England, France and Germany together but to lose the lives of our young men affects us more than to lose our money. Therefore we should do our utmost at home to help bring the war to finish. He emphasized especially the food saving which is one of the means at hand to do our bit here at home. He said there should be no waste in the garbage pail. The housewives should use substitutes as much as possible.

At the close of the mayor's address Pastor Schmidt, in referring to the recent shortage of water downtown asked the mayor what kind of a substitute he should offer the residents of Rondout in the place of water.

At the close of the program the audience tendered a vote of thanks to Miss Stuart. Mayor Canfield and the singers.

The meeting was brought to a close by the audience singing "America."

Intercollegiate Rowing Considered Dead Letter—Youngsters Given to Forge Ahead in Tennis—Golf Not Much Hurt.

Speculation continues to be the principal activity among followers of all lines of sports as to what will be the outcome during the coming year in the far western states.

Colleges, schools and clubs are practically agreed that all branches of sport should be continued on as broad a scale as possible during the progress of the war.

At the moment it would appear that so far as intercollegiate rowing is concerned on the Pacific coast, it will be considered as a dead letter. With the determination of the University of California and Stanford university not to put crews on the water this spring, varsity competition will be robbed of much interest. On the other hand, rowing clubs doubtless will continue to hold their various regattas.

Baseball will be continued as nearly as possible along pre-war lines although it is believed by many that the quality of games offered may suffer because of the absence of many stars through volunteering and the draft. Officials, both of the Pacific Coast league and the newly named Pacific Coast Intercollegiate league, formerly the Northwestern league, appear optimistic in this respect, however.

Practically all of the California tennis stars, who are nationally known already are enrolled in the service of the country. This is contended, will afford an unusual opportunity for the youngsters to forge into limelight and become known.

Golf, with its larger proportion of men shore the draft age, seems to be less affected by the war than most of the other branches of sport. That racketing will continue to hold the interest of its devotees, is best attested by the fact that reports from various parts of the country indicate that many new craft, both sail and motor, are being, or will be built for the coming season. This notwithstanding the fact that many of the younger amateur stars are working with the various mosquito and reserve fleets of the United States.

There appears to be no question as to the future of trap shooting. With the encouragement of shooting by the government of the war, this sport enjoyed an excellent year during 1917, and the consensus of opinion appears to be that this condition of affairs will be repeated during 1918.

Fred Fulton received $4,900 or a little better than $544 a minute for knocking out Frank Moran at New Orleans. Moran drew $4,200 as his end. The gross receipts were $14,000. MOUNTAIN JOE

By LEON W. DEAN.

Mountain House Joe he was called. If it was an exclusive bit of scenery you wanted, an exceptionally fine trout or a deer in season, Mountain House Joe would see that you got it.

He was like any one of a hundred other Adirondack guides—and different. Just where the likeness left off and the difference began it was hard to tell. Whatever the reason, Mountain House Joe was considered the most popular guide in the mountains.

One night in the rugged defiles of Indian pass he gave us the first real peep beneath the crust. We were looking away over a score of darkening mountain peaks to where Whiteface reared its lofty head, still strongly etched against the northern sky.

"How sings Horace?—mounds moles operosa—the toil-wright mass of the world! I wonder what the old Roman would say if he could look upon a sight such as this?"

It was Lieutenant Golden who spoke. Joe, squatting on his heels by the fire where he was preparing the evening meal, turned his head abruptly.

"If he were modest he would say that you had just given him credit for what rightfully belongs to Ovid."

The temptation had proved too provoking and our cook of many a merry excursion had suddenly become a scholar of the classics. But straightway he was Mountain House Joe again and no amount of urging on our part could complete the metamorphosis.

"What the deuce is the matter with the fellow?" whispered Charlie Osgood after a series of incoherent attempts to inveigle him into conversation.

Despairing at length of a story from Joe, which we had come to anticipate as a part of the regular evening program, we turned back to the papers, which the ladies had brought with them, now several days old.

It was fall and the annual Yale-Harvard football battle was only a few weeks distant. The papers were full of it.

We were a Harvard crowd and felt free to express our minds.

"All Brickley," said Dick Valentine, turning the pages, "All Brickley and Harvard."

It was Mrs. Mabel who saved the day. Mrs. Mabel was Dick's wife, but that didn't happen to help Dick any in this instance.

She laughed, and when Mrs. Mabel laughs it is irresistible. "Well, I guess we clean forgot that Cambridge wasn't the center of the earth," she said.

"I'll cover that bet," he said quietly. "Dick had half risen to her feet."

"When I saw that look in her eyes," said Charlie Osgood, telling of it afterwards, "I thought my scalp was called for sure. Then that big lanky son-of-a-gun grabbed her as though it was the real thing in a wild Indian massacre and I closed my eyes to shut out the tragedy. When I opened them again they were still bugging each other."

"Well," he said, "I'll wager even money, ten to ten, that Harvard wins two weeks from Saturday."

A tall lean figure stalked into the firelight circle.

WHEN A CONTRACTOR MAY BE A LABORER

Court of Appeals Defines the Matter in McNally Case Opinion and Also Decides That McNally's Work Was Related to the Business.

In deciding last week the appeal taken by Charles McNally of Saugerties from the order of the appellate division of the supreme court (in the Third Judicial District) dismissing his claim against the Diamond Mills Paper Company and the Employers' Mutual Insurance Company, the court of appeals handed down an interesting opinion which clearly defines when a man is a contractor and when a laborer.

The court holds that McNally at the time of the accident for which he was awarded compensation by the State Industrial Commission, which award was reversed by the appellate division, was a laborer and not a contractor, and also that the work he was doing was related directly to the business of the Diamond Mills Paper Company and therefore he comes within the statute relating to hazardous risks.

The opinion of the court was written by Judge Cardozo and all the judges concur. It is as follows:

Appeal from an order of the appellate division of the supreme court for the third department, reversing an award of the state industrial commission and dismissing the claim.

Frederick E. W. Burrow for appellant.

Merton E. Lewis, attorney general (E. C. Aiken of counsel) for state industrial commission.

Joseph A. Warren for respondents. Cardozo, J. In 1914 the Diamond Mills Paper Company had a plant at Saugerties, N. Y. It needed another engine, and bought one from the Erie City Iron Works. The manufacturer agreed to furnish an engineer "to supervise installation." Charles McNally, the claimant, undertook to move the engine from the railroad to the plant for $225. After the contract had been fully performed, he was asked by one of the officers of the paper mill to assist in the work of installation. He was to be paid by day's labor. He brought with him two of his own hired men, and his own blocking, rigging and jacks. Two of the permanent employees of the mill, and two others hired for the job, worked with him. In charge of them all was the engineer. In the course of the work the claimant hurt his arm. The industrial commission made an award. The appellate division reversed, and dismissed the claim.

We think there is evidence to sustain the finding that the claimant when injured was an employee, and not an independent contractor. That he was a contractor while engaged in transporting the engine from the railroad to the mill may be conceded. But when that contract had been performed, he assumed a new relation. He was then employed by the day to work as a laborer with others. He was not in control of the job; he had no power of superintendence or direction. He had no other rank than the regular employees of the mill who were with him; he took his orders from the engineer whom the mill had placed in charge. In this situation, the distinctive tokens of the independent contractor are lacking. The claimant for the purpose of this job was an employee, and nothing more. What he may have been at other times and for other purposes does not concern us. It is true that his employment was temporary and casual, but that is not enough to exclude him from the protection of the statute. (Matter of De Noyer v. Cavanaugh, 221 N. Y. 271.) It is true also that he brought two of his own men with him; but he made no profit from their labor. His position was like that of the claimant in Thompson v. Teiss (96 Conn. 441, 448, 119), where compensation was awarded. There are other cases of like tenor (Cottle v. Embury, Martin Lumber Co. 192 Mich. 285; Matter of Peake v. Larkin, 221 N. Y. 496; Woods v. Tupper Lake Chemical Co., 221 N. Y. 6601). McNally did not undertake to accomplish a specific job in his own way. He did not undertake to accomplish anything. He undertook to help and to obey.

The appellate division assumed that the claimant was an employee, but held that the award was condemned by our decision in Matter of Bargey v. Massaro Macaroni Co. (218 N. Y. 110). The accident occurred before the amendment of the statute in 1916 (Matter of Dose v. Moebis Lithographic Co., 221 N. Y. 4011). The business of the Diamond Mills Paper Company was the manufacture of paper, which under group 15 of section 2 of the act is a hazardous employment. (Workmen's Comp. Law, § 2.) In the view of the appellate division, the claimant, though an employee, did not come within the statute because the risks which he incurred were not the risks of the employer's business. We think, however, that they were, and that the Bargey case has been misread. There a corporation engaged in the manufacture of macaroni used part of a building as a factory, and leased part as a saloon (170 App. Div. 102, 104). It employed a carpenter to put a partition in the saloon, and this work was held to have no relation to the hazardous employment. In those circumstances, our ruling was that the carpenter was not an employee within the intent of the statute (218 N. Y. 410, 413). We have a different situation here. This mill was a going concern; to run it to its full capacity there was need of new machinery; and the installation of another engine was incidental to its continued operation. The men who were doing this work were not improving some building belonging to their employer, but unrelated to the business. They were furthering the business itself. The claimant's position was like that of the clerk in Matter of Larsen v. Paine Drug Co. (218 N. Y. 252). There the employer was a manufacturer of drugs. The accident came to Larsen while building a shelf. We said that what he was doing was fairly incidental to the business, and declined to condition relief upon the presence of "the characteristic process or operation" which caused the business to be grouped as hazardous (Matter of Mulford v. Petit & Sons, 220 N. Y. 540; Matter of Fogarty v. Nat. Biscuit Co., 221 N. Y. 20; Matter of Dose v. Lithographic Co., supra).

The order of the appellate division should be reversed, and the award affirmed, with costs in this court and in the appellate division.

Hiscock, Ch. J., Chase, Collins, Cuddback, Pound and Andrews, JJ. concur.

Order reversed, etc.

POULTRY FACTS

SOUR MILK FOR LAYING HENS

Most Excellent Substitute for Meat Scrap and Will Give Good Returns During Winter.

While the production of eggs during the winter when high prices prevail is the result of proper breeding, hatching, rearing and care, proper feeding will always tend to stimulate egg production at that season. One reason why hens lay well in spring and summer is that they are able to obtain animal protein in the form of bugs and worms. During fall and winter, therefore, the poultry feeder should attempt to imitate summer feed conditions. The commercial poultryman supplies animal protein by feeding meat scraps, but the farmer often fails to provide this feed. Skim milk, preferably sour, is a most excellent substitute for meat scrap and will give good returns when fed to laying hens. Numerous experiments have shown that laying hens fed skim milk will double in egg production similar hens fed no form of animal protein.

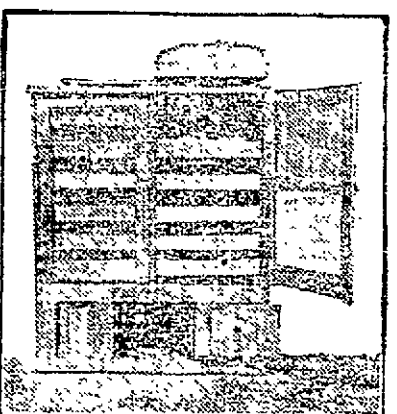

According to F. D. Crooks of the Pennsylvania State college school of agriculture and experiment station, the exact value of sour milk as a source of protein, is difficult to state. Numerous feeding trials, however, place its value at 50 cents to $2 per 100 pounds.

Skim milk lowers the cost of producing a dozen eggs. On the farm it may mean the difference between profit and loss in connection with the farm flock. Sour milk has a medicinal effect also. It keeps hens in good health and helps prevent disease.

SPROUTED OATS FOR FOWLS

Recommended as Green Feed for Poultry by Specialist of Department of Agriculture.

The poultry specialists of the U. S. department of agriculture advise that sprouted oats fed as green feed to hens confined to yards cost about 10 cents per hen a year and one cent per dozen eggs, not including any charges for labor and equipment. In the experiments of these specialists the hens ate on an average in one year about 1.3 pounds of sprout and 0.7 of a pound of grit, which together cost about one cent per hen.

CLEAN-CUT POULTRY HOUSES

Let Only Odor Be Suggestive of Cleanliness—Lice and Mites Will Increase Rapidly.

Clean out the poultry houses, coops and nests and thoroughly disinfect them. Keep them clean and let the only odor about them be one suggestive of cleanliness. The time is at hand when lice and mites and bluebirds will increase rapidly and overrun the place in a little while. The best weapon to fight them with is cleanliness.

Brought War Into Home.

The beginning of hostilities between Italy and Austria was the cause of similar activity in the household of Anthony Sokelle, says his wife, formerly Baroness Bianca Alessi, in her divorce complaint, filed at New York. "She is a Croatian," she alleges, "and I am an Italian baroness. We have been a raving maniac since our respective countries got into war. I'm through."

Aptitude and capacity, he had demonstrated both, but now—the end! His mind in a deep mental trough, he saw nothing ahead but dark shadows. The lurking moon leaped forth from behind a bank of clouds and his pulse doubled as it revealed the house half a square distant where he lived. A dread purpose in his mind, he welcomed its silence and loneliness to hide him from the world. "Gone stale," he muttered hoarsely. "They dared to say that—and hisses! The rabble! So much for genius!" Dark doors and gloom—shrouded houses again, as the orb of night was obscured. He hurried his steps. He entered the building he had aimed for, no longer a bright vision house, as it had been, but the tomb of all his fond ambitions.

"A fallen star," he groaned, as he entered one of the suite of rooms, his bachelor apartments. He double locked the door behind him, turned on the electric light, threw himself into the velvet chair and with bent brows sat glaring into space.

One hand had reached within his breast, groped there and came forth clasping a small square phial. He held it up towards the light. Its ruby contents sparkling against the electric radiance. His face had grown preternaturally pale, but he laughed, a low, harsh, cynical laugh, full of desperation and bitterness.

"The rabble," he uttered again. "Fiekie, unjust, cruel! A king de-sion of unrestrained fury to helpless subjugation, to an influence or emotion potent to change the lion into the lamb.

"You—Harold Wynne!"—the would-be suicide said weakly, and sank back into the chair he had just vacated, and dropping his bloodless face into his hands he bent forward, convulsing with the searful emotions consuming his strong, but now drifting, soul.

The intruder whom Darius Marsh had designated as Harold Wynne stood directly in front of him with a pitying face. For some moments there was a dead silence. Then the hand of Wynne reached out with a touch tender as that of a pitying angel. It rested on the bowed head of the other.

"I feared when I learned of the blow to your pride, to your fond dreams of ambition," spoke the young man, "that you would never face it as would those of common clay. I hurried here, for I knew that here you would finally come. My friend, my patron, my more than father, oh! crush down the impulse that would make of you a reproach to yourself. You, whose might, will and genius should lift you high above the heads of the common herd."

"You do not know," began the other, and his tones were fervent with the humiliation of a proud spirit crushed down into the mire.

"I know all," interrupted the other, "and I realize the deep wound that popular caprice had dealt your noble nature. I have hustened to you, who have made me all that I am. I have abandoned all my own petty affairs and have come to remain by your side, your champion, your protector, until back into the teeth of the snarling critic, the hidden snarler in the grass, your envious rivals, you have flung the taunting reproach with which they dared to assail you. What! Lie down to be crushed by that groveling horde! Oh, never! never! You shall rise to your glory and grandeur. Aye, higher and more brilliant, more steadfast. I know it! I swear it! I have come to help you accomplish it, with faith in your rare dramatic power. I know that the world needs you, wants you."

Darius Marsh lifted his bloodless face, a faint token of hope apparent amid his weariness.

"If there were nothing but the tide of gratitude and devotion that binds me to you," began Wynne, "and regard for the noble woman whose love is an inestimable treasure—"

"Do not name her! I forbid you!" cried Marsh, springing to his feet and pacing the floor in poignant, uncontrollable emotion. "That is a dream gone by. Think you I would link her glorious fame to the failure, the humiliation, the poverty that is now my lot? She, the matchless, whose spell of melody has held two continents in thrall. Never! I had hoped to sustain the incomparable reputation I had seemingly won. I saw not only fame, but wealth ahead. And now, crumpled to dust, I see the false fabric of my vision in ruins."

This had happened: Darius Marsh for a year had held the popular stage as the most finished tragedian of a quarter of a century. He had practically adopted Harold Wynne, the son of a dead friend, and had seen him started upon a substantial and promising business career. He had won the love of the superb queen of song, Aeline Ward. That stately woman had given up her career to become the wife of a man to whom she had given the deepest love of her heart. She was wealthy, and up to a month ago Mr. Marsh, earning the highest compensation in the profession, had won glorious laurels and money without stint.

There were those who had envied him: there were critics whom his open, independent way had offended. Then, too, he had come to a city where the audiences were of the coarser grade. His magnificent rendition of one of the most peerless of all Shakespearean characters had palled upon the shallow appreciation of an audience whose tastes had been vitiated by the tinseled alibiments of burlesque and ragtime music. The management read the end in depleted audiences. One night there was no applause, the next a hiss. In the strength of his pride Darius Marsh receded his contract.

Women Becoming More Active in Loan

Careful Division of Reserve District Into Sections Enables Them to Increase Efforts.

The Woman's Liberty Loan Committee of the Second Federal Reserve District, of which Mrs. John T. Pratt is chairman, is organized in a thoroughly businesslike fashion. The whole district, which includes New York state, northern New Jersey and Fairfield county, Conn., is divided into four parts, each with its vice chairman, and into eight subdivisions, each with a subdivision chairman. Of these subdivisions the largest is the Metropolitan district, which includes Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx, and of which Mrs. Courtlandt D. Barnes is the chairman. Mrs. Barnes has been actively at work for some weeks in her New York office planning the campaign for her district and has devised many new and interesting forms of activity to aid in the sale of Liberty Bonds.

The Committee on Booths, under Miss Louise Dixon, is already scouting for good sites for the booths, which will be situated in conspicuous portions of the city, in hotels, restaurants, railway stations, theaters, busy street corners, etc., and will be manned by trained bond saleswomen, many of them volunteers from among the leading society girls of the city.

In the last campaign a large part of the subscriptions that were made in the Woman's Committee, both in the Metropolitan districts and in northern New Jersey and Fairfield county, Conn., were made through the booths. Since the Woman's Committee feels that its special value lies in securing the small subscriptions which might otherwise be overlooked, special emphasis is laid on the work of the Trades Committee among the people of foreign sections and among the employees of factories and shops. Mrs.

sented the ingratitude of a capricious public, the petty meannesses of his enemies. Sensitive, tuned up mentally like to a delicate instrument, he resolved never again to appeal to popular favor, and the impulse to end it all had overweighed his reason for the time being.

It was love and devotion that carried the day, the influence of loyal Harold Wynne, a realization of the unselfish affection of the noble-souled operatic star. Within a week's time Wynne had unfolded his plan. Reluctantly and half dubiously Marsh assented to its details.

It was a month later when the largest theater in the city advertised as a leading feature for the next week's program "the marvelous impersonator, Walsingham." No one had ever heard of him before, but the statement was advertised broadcast that he was one of the most extraordinary mimics in the world. His repertoire included impersonations of all the great tragedians. So faithful to nature were these, that after the first night the house was fairly packed. The feature became the attraction of the week. Then for the last performance it was announced that Walsingham "would give an impersonation of Darius Marsh in his famous Shakespearean success."

There was a certain mystery surrounding Walsingham. He never appeared in public. He got to his dressing room and out of it wearing a false beard and evaded all fellow artists. On the final night of the engagement a woman sat far back in a private box. She was Aeline Ward. Nearer to the front sat Harold Wynne.

The impersonation of "the fallen star" began amid a deep hush. Those who had seen the original role sat spellbound. Then as the actor backed off the stage the critics were cheering, old players stood up waving their arms in a frenzy of enthusiasm. The vast auditorium was almost a scene of riot. Never had so faithful and thrilling a portrait been delivered! Amid thunders of applause Walsingham returned to the stage. He was recalled once, twice, three. Then, removing wig and facial mask, he stood revealed—Darius Marsh.

In a flash the audience comprehended—then pandemonium broke loose.

Again and again Darius Marsh was called before the curtain, his old prestige re-established. "The fallen star" was once more fixed in the Armament of fame.

Nor only fortune, not only fame his, but love—the tender devotion of the peerless creature, Aeline Ward, whose clever plan had influenced the test that led the fickle public back to its old idol.

BROWNIES

Many a white shirt covers a black heart.

It's a wise child that knows enough to come in when it rains.

No woman was ever made genuinely mad at being called beautiful.

The cyclone cellar seems to be heading the list of the six best.

More room for the sunny soul who hasn't entirely forgotten how to whistle.

A husband who will stand without twitching is one of the noblest works of God.

It is hard to make the consumer here in the old adage that what goes up must come down.

Is a bone as dry as they say? How is it when a man has a crack in his back and a spring in his knee? or how about a tea bone?

The old-fashioned woman who could make a dress has been supplanted by the modern type who makes an address. One could sew but the other is only so so.

New York's Fire Bells. Once, and up to a day within the memory of living men, New York had its fire bells. Eleven of them were hung in wooden towers about Manhattan. A writer of 1837 declared that these bells rang at least 500 times in the 365 days of the year. One of the old alarmers still hangs at the top of Mount Morris park, in Harlem.

BOOKS WANTED BUT NO MONEY

The big book drive, of the Kingston City Library for books for the soldiers and sailors, is now on and the person who has not heard of it from some source, must be a hermit indeed.

The ministers have announced it from their pulpits, and appeal slips have been given out in the churches; the Boy Scouts have distributed leaflets at the movies; a separate personal appeal has been made to the high school students and the Federation of Women's Clubs; the merchants have very kindly displayed posters in their store windows and in a great many cases, have offered to bring to the library any books which are left at their stores. However, in private homes, are also large collections of books, which the people are willing to give but have no way of bringing them to the library. If some public spirited citizens, with automobiles, would volunteer to get these books and bring them to the library, it would be very much appreciated.

The splendid books which are pouring in, show that the people are giving much thought about the kind of books needed. The deluge of "Socks and Sardines" and old magazines which so many libraries in the country have complained of, seems to have missed Kingston. With a very few exceptions, the books are decidedly well worth sending on to the camps.

Non-fiction is wanted as well as fiction. A librarian starting in at a new post, expected that the first call would be for G. B. McCutcheon or Jack London. He was somewhat surprised when the first patron asked for Shakespeare's "Penceloes."

Give your latest war book; you will probably not read it again. The boy in khaki is waiting for it. Reading it will prepare him for conditions "over there."

Books are asked for instead of money—which ought to be a relief in these days of many demands—and the home which has not at least one book to spare must be hopelessly poverty stricken or its inhabitants hopelessly selfish.

CHARLES BAUER "IS OVER THERE"

PRIVATE CHARLES BAUER.

Of No. 35 Abbey street, now a member of the American forces in France, was a member of the second contingent of Ulster county men who were sent to Camp Dix on September 29 of last year. His mother, Mrs. K. Bauer, on Saturday received word from her boy that he was safe on the other side of the big pond, and was enjoying good health, and that they were being well treated. Private Bauer before going to Camp Dix was employed at the United States Laco Curtain Mills. His host of friends will be glad to learn of his safe arrival in France. Private Bauer's brother, Henry, enlisted in the army last Wednesday and is now at Fort Slocum.

A meeting of the Brotherhood of the Methodist Church will be held Wednesday evening in the chapel. Rev. K. M. Reynolds of East Durham will address the meeting. All members are requested to be present at this meeting.

ULSTER CO. SOCIETY HAS 320 MEMBERS

But It Will Accept More and There Are Hundreds Who Should and Doubtless Will Join—List of Members.

The Ulster County Society in the city of New York has entered its second year, with a membership of over 300. It was organized November 16, 1916, with 14 members, and on January 15, 1917, held the first big meeting in the Hotel Woodstock, New York, with nearly 75 members in attendance. The arrangements for the first annual banquet were made and on February 19, 1917, the first dinner was held at the Hotel Manhattan, New York with about 150 in attendance, out of a membership of 200.

The second annual meeting of the society was held in the Hotel Woodstock, on November 15, 1917, when the secretary reported a membership of nearly 300. After discussion it was decided to hold another banquet, and the entertainment committee, William Winter, Frank Van Anden and Holley R. Cantine, was given power to make arrangements for the second annual dinner, which was held in the Hotel Biltmore on February 9, 1918.

The present membership is 320, which speaks well for the interest taken by the members. Below is a revised list of members, and application blank. As you read the list it may bring to your mind some of your acquaintances from Old Ulster whom you would like to see members of the society. You can help make them such, by telling them to write to Joseph Drake, Secretary,

FARLEY'S TALK TO THE RETAILERS

A large crowd is expected on Thursday evening to hear Mr. Farley lecture to the merchants of the city.
This will be given in the Elks' Auditorium and Secretary Trevelyan is looking for such a large audience that he has made arrangements for additional chairs to be placed in the hall.
Let us be able to say as one chamber of commerce did, "About eight hundred of our merchants and clerks heard Mr. Farley and it was generally pronounced one of the most constructive and helpful lectures ever given in our city. Your organization will find the latch-string out should you wish to pay us a similar visit in the future."

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS NOTES

The Juniors to Play Midgets.
This afternoon after school in the high school gymnasium, the Juniors are going to play the Midget basketball team. The Midgets have determined to take vengeance on the Juniors for all the wrongs they have done the Seniors so most probably the game will be a very exciting one.
The Varsity basketball team was defeated at Liberty on Friday night
the past week.

The A. A. Minstrels
The last entertainment to be held at the high school until after the Easter vacation will be the minstrel show to be given by the Athletic Association on Friday of this week in the auditorium of the high school.
The dancing after the show will be ten cents extra although not so designated on the tickets. A large crowd is expected as the show is going to be the best ever.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: Small

Worth While Quotation.
"Some people seem to take up all the sorrows of the past; to them they add the burdens of the present; then they look ahead and anticipate a great many more trials than they will ever experience in the future."

Everybody Does It.
One form which our national lyrics not infrequently takes is to say, when a prominent friend finally does come around and pay back what he owes you, or part of it: "Why — forgotten all about it!"—Ohio Stat.
